Autism Society Partners with IBCCES

(JACKSONVILLE) May 27, 2015 - The Autism Society recently announced they will be partnering with the autism certification experts from the International Board of Credentialing & Continuing Education Standards (IBCCES), to help facilitate and encourage the creation of much needed Certified Autism Specialists across the country.

With the increasing incidence of autism, it should come as no surprise that autism based organizations are challenged to develop new programs to meet the increasing training requirements for educators, licensed professionals and other caregivers of individuals with Autism.

The latest example comes from the Autism Society, the nation's leading grassroots autism organization, with over 120,000 Autism Society members and supporters nationwide. The Autism Society is concerned about building the capacity to serve people with autism and is highly focused on creating ways to increase the quantity of qualified people working with autism.

About IBCCES

The International Board of Credentialing and Continuing Education Standards (IBCCES) was established in 2001 to meet the training and credentialing needs of professionals who work with individuals with special needs. IBCCES has since expanded into over 40 different countries with training centers and members across the globe.

Our Certified Autism Specialist, Board Certified Cognitive Specialist, and Certified Autism Center credentials were established with the highest standards in the industry. As a result, our programs have become the benchmark for those who work with cognitive disorders around the globe.

IBCCES created and hosts the annual International Symposium on Cognitive Research & Disorders. This global event brings together top neurologists, education leaders, and healthcare experts with a focus on research, innovation and collaboration.
